Hint Blood Taint In Willie Stevens

Her name was often mentioned as one of those against whom Prosecutor Simpson, before the trial, would seek perjury indictments.

Phillip Payne, managing editor of a New York tabloid particularly active in the investigation, also is scheduled to be called today.

The defense, in cross-examination of the state's fingerprint experts, has had some measure of success in proving that there were numerous opportunities for tampering with the calling card found at Dr. Hall's feet, and said to bear the print of Willie Stevens's left index finger.

Edward A. Schwartz the Newark expert, has admitted that he turned the card over to Payne several months ago. Simpson, it is understood, wishes to have Payne show that the card was carefully protected while in his possession. The editor may also be asked as to certain facts his investigation of the crime revealed.

The defense is incensed at Payne and his newspaper, and intends to assail him bitterly.

The prosecution also hoped today to question John V. Hubbard, the New Brunswick undertaker, concerning the examination he led Dr. Cronk to make of Mrs. Mills's body.

Simpson contends that Hubbard acted on instructions from State Senator Florence, at that time Mrs. Hall's personal attorney. The physician has testified that he examined the choir singer's head for concealed evidence, such as bullets, and her abdomen to see if she was pregnant and if any organs had been removed. He swore she was NOT pregnant.

The prosecutor has obtained a bench warrant, which he intends to serve today if Hubbard does not appear.

Hall-Stevens Plan $10,000,000 Suits business reputation have been irreparably harmed by his detention here since last July.

In their libel suits the defendants will claim that their arrest and trial was a "newspaper circulation conspiracy," linked with a peculiar Jersey political scheme.

They will contend that the now-famous Hall-Mills "expose" had been offered by an impecunious Englishman to several New York papers before it was accepted by the tabloid.

Robert H. McCarter

The Englishman, who they believe finally sold his story, was arrested and extradited two years ago as he was attempting to sell the Hall-Mills story in the office of a New York editor. He later re-entered the country via Canada, it is reported.

Mrs. Minna Clarke, now waiting grand jury indictment as an accessory to the murders, is another who contemplates legal redress. She was named by the state as Gorsline's partner in the "love spy" act.

"A mere acquittal by this jury will not satisfy me," Mrs. Hall has told friends.

"When I am free I shall spend my last dollar to expose the dastardly plot that resulted in our arrest and trial as the murderers of my dear husband and Mrs. Mills.

"Those persons who gave perjured testimony against us shall be made to suffer as we have suffered. They, too, shall languish in jail cells, while they taste the bitter misery that we have endured."

Simpson, a leader and yet a thorn in the side of Jersey's Democratic machine, is in a peculiar position. If he obtains convictions in this trial the party will use it as a campaign issue. Should he fail, the party will "step from under," leaving Simpson to shoulder the blame. Thus the personal publicity he has reaped by the prosecution will prove a boomerang to the bantam barrister.

Nothing Unlawful Is Worth While

ment after. When people can present to themselves the exact feeling which follows upon a debauch or an infamy, they will repent of it beforehand instead of afterwards, when it is too late."

Would that all the parties to this double tragedy had done this in advance, first of the domestic infamies and, secondly, in connection with the murders that followed after.

Don't miss Dr. Straton's startling analysis of the Hall-Mills trial every day, exclusively in The GRAPHIC.

POSED BY THE FAMOUS MABEL NORMAND AND STELLAR CAST

By Hal Roach

Rose (Mabel Normand) wends her way to a park bench. While she rests once more her mind pictures a romance with her "Prince Charming," who, unknown to her, is Ted Tudor (Carl Miller), a young millionaire. She decides to try another accident.

She starts to crawl under a parked car to insure herself of a "perfect" accident, when the driver steps in, but a policeman spies her and gives her a vigorous "Safety First" lecture.

Later Rose tries another accident. This time she is really hit by a driver, who speeds on without offering aid to his victim. Half unconscious Rose is picked up by a kindly gentleman and carried into the residence in front of which the accident occurred.

She starts to come to, but plays sick when she realizes that at last she is going into a "swell" house. A gruff housekeeper takes her in charge and puts her to bed. Rose wonders where Fate has placed her. (To be concluded)
